Dear Members and Friends of the ELI,

One of the most fascinating and challenging debates in Europe (and beyond) concerns the various legal issues which emerge from the rapid progress of the digital revolution. The platform economy challenges established paradigms for contract and consumer law. Data has become both a currency and a commodity, which raises difficult questions about rights over one's data. Autonomous devices and highly-sophisticated robotics are becoming part of our every-day lives. The possibilities of additive layer manufacturing (3D printing) are ever-increasing and at the same time within touching distance of consumers. Block-chain technology might create new business models and pose fresh regulatory challenges. There can be little doubt that disruptive technology has disrupted the law, and developing a legal response is top of the list of priorities for both lawyers and policy-makers alike.

The European Commission is conducting a broad discussion on a wide variety of issues, aware of the urgency which the rapid advance of digitalisation entails, but at the same time avoiding a rush to legislate. This approach is appropriate as the legal issues are still being identified and debated, even if some national governments are eager to go further.

The ELI is a leading participant in this debate: its Special Interest Group on Digital Law is very active, and one of the ELI's current adopted projects focuses on Draft Model Rules for Online Intermediary Platforms. Another is a feasibility study with the American Law Institute on data as an asset and tradeable item. Most recently, the ELI hosted a Conference at my home institution (and indeed that of ELI President Diana Wallis), the University of Hull (UK), on 'Emerging Legal Issues in an Increasingly Digital Society'. The Conference was attended by more than 60 delegates and there was lively discussion on many aspects of the digital revolution. The University of Hull has a long tradition of legal scholarship on aspects of EU Law, including through its Institute of European Public Law (home of the European Public Law journal) and as a host (twice) for the Acquis Group during the preparation of the Draft Common Frame of Reference (DCFR). Welcoming so many ELI Members to Hull was therefore particularly pleasing.

The Conference took place the day after the United Kingdom formally invoked Art. 50 TEU to begin the process of leaving the EU. There is a fear among legal scholars that their future participation in collaborative research in the EU is at risk. By contrast, the timing of the Conference underlined that the ELI is an institute for the whole of Europe. It is reassuring that the ELI's European Legal Community is not limited to the EU, and UK scholars will be able to contribute actively to the ELI in the future.

ELI Elections

The ELI's third Council elections, electing half of the Council seats, will take place at the General Assembly in Vienna on 6 and 7 September 2017, giving Fellows enough time to cast their votes for their preferred candidates. The election procedure is governed by the ELI Election Byelaw adopted in Council Decision 2013/5 of 2 April 2013, which can be consulted here. The list of remaining Council members, whose mandate lasts until 2019, can be consulted here.

The elections are prepared and administrated by the ELI Secretariat and overseen by the Returning Officer, Irmgard Griss (Speaker of the Senate). The election procedure is divided into two phases:

- Nomination and endorsement period (28 April - 16 June)

- Elections at the General Assembly in Vienna (6-7 September)

Nomination and Endorsement phase

The nomination and endorsement phase lasts from 28 April to 16 June. In order to stand for election, each candidate must submit a completed nomination form together with a portrait photo. The form can be downloaded here. You can submit the nomination form by sending it together with a portrait photograph to the ELI Secretariat at: elections@europeanlawinstitute.eu, where staff will upload the information onto the MyELI platform for other Members to see.

All nominations must be endorsed by five Fellows. Candidates cannot endorse their own nominations. Endorsements can be given electronically via email to elections@europeanlawinstitute.eu during the same period (28 April to 16 June). Fellows who would like to stand for elections are encouraged to send or upload their nomination forms as soon as possible in order to provide other Fellows with adequate time to endorse them before the deadline passes on 16 June.

Alternatively, nominations will be considered complete and endorsed if nomination forms are submitted to the ELI Secretariat no later than 16 June together with completed endorsement forms from five ELI Fellows. The endorsement form can be downloaded here. All forms must be sent to elections@europeanlawinstitute.eu. These candidates' profiles will be uploaded onto the MyELI platform and labelled as 'endorsed'.

Each ELI Fellow may endorse an unlimited number of candidates. The names of endorsers will be visible only to the Returning Officer and support staff in the Secretariat.

The full list of endorsed candidates will be published no later than two months before the elections. Every ELI Fellow, present at the meeting of the General Assembly, is entitled to vote. Proxy voting is possible, with the number of proxies limited to one proxy per Fellow in attendance. The elected candidates become members of the Council on the condition that they accept their election.

The first meeting of the newly elected Council will follow after the announcement of the election results on 7 September. This meeting will be the venue of the election of the President, Vice-President, Treasurer and the four other members of the Executive Committee. It is therefore important that candidates who stand for election as a new Council member arrange their schedule so as to enable them to take part in the meeting.

Updates on Projects

Criminal Law Instrument

The ELI is proud to announce that the results of the Project 'Prevention and Settlement of Conflicts of Exercise of Jurisdiction in Criminal Law' have been approved as an Instrument of the European Law Institute.

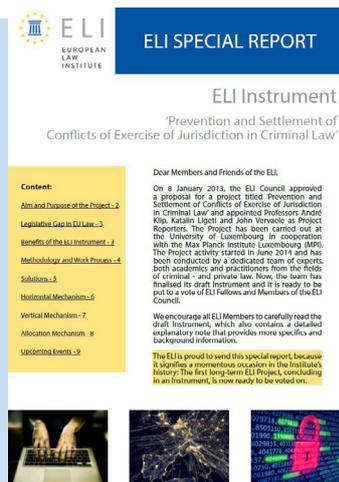

This represents a milestone for the Institute, as this is the first long-term Project that produced results in the form of an Instrument. The Project was put to a vote of both the ELI Council and all ELI Fellows.

The ELI thanks the Project Reporters, Professors Katalin Ligeti, André Klip and John Vervaele for their excellent work and congratulates them on the impressive results.

Initially, the Project aimed at elaborating a new legal framework for the prevention and resolution of conflicts of jurisdiction in criminal matters in the Area of Freedom, Security and Justice within Europe. That is a truly important goal and an undertaking that is long overdue. The Project Team went above and beyond their initial aims and produced not one, but three complete legal frameworks. In the words of Professor John Vervaele: 'We came up with three different policy options and related legal frameworks, each with many different implementation options. By doing this we have ensured that whatever policy option is chosen by the legislator our project provides sound legal advice. In the end, each of our proposals will substantially improve European justice.'

The approved Instrument can be found here. A short report and explanation on the project's background and aims, as well as a description of the results can be found here.

Workshop on 'Building a Data Economy'

On 20 March 2017, the Workshop on 'Building a Data Economy' was held in Vienna at the Haus der Europäischen Union.

The Workshop was organised by ELI Vice-President Christiane Wendehorst. The main aim of the Workshop was to get an overview of the most relevant fields of law affected by the rise of the data economy. A broad and open approach is necessary to identify what further efforts will be needed to distinguish overarching themes and common approaches to data in different areas of law.

Twenty participants from Europe and the United States of America attended the Workshop, among others, representatives of the European Commission. They discussed whether our law is fit for data as a key economic asset and tradeable item. The discussion was vibrant and greatly benefitted from the presence of experts from many different fields of law.

The outcomes will provide the ELI and American Law Institute (ALI) teams working on a feasibility study on 'Data as an asset and Tradeable item in the 21st Century' a lot of food for thought.

Conference on Digitalisation in Hull, UK

The European Law Institute organised a Conference on Digitalisation in Hull, United Kingdom, on 30-31 March 2017. The title of the Conference was 'Emerging Legal Issues in an Increasingly Digital Society'. The Conference was held at The Lawns Centre, where more than 60 participants came together to exchange ideas and discuss recent trends such as smart contracts and block-chain technology, the use of personal data as payment, 3D printing, liability issues, and online access to justice.

The Conference was opened by ELI President, Diana Wallis, and Gonzalo Villalta Puig, Head of the School of Law and Politics at the University of Hull. Both were delighted to welcome the ELI to Hull and the UK. Villalta Puig said that he was honoured to have the ELI organise the Conference at the University, as the study of European Law and International Law are very much at the core of the identity of the law school. President Wallis, Senior Fellow of the University's School of Law and Politics, expressed her great pleasure to be able to invite the ELI to the UK and emphasised that 'the Conference shows that even on the day after the UK invoked Article 50 TEU, the ELI is still a European legal community'.

Lord John Thomas, Lord Chief Justice of England and Wales, gave a keynote speech on the challenges and opportunities presented by the online delivery of justice. He described the continuing work on the online courts and what risks need to be avoided and what hurdles overcome in order to implement an online procedure that can deliver better and more expedient results.

Lord John Thomas, Sjef van Erp, Dirk Staudenmayer and Wojciech Wiewiórowski.

The first day of the ELI Conference on Digitalisation commenced with a session on 'e-CODEX and Access to Justice'. For this session, Peggy Struck, Head of Operations and Growth with Crowdjustice, elaborated on how crowdfunding can be used to bring forward more cases of public interest, with low economic value. Crowdjustice has already funded more than 180 cases and one of the examples where Crowdjustice has had an impact recently was by funding the 'People's Challenge', a court case that was successfully brought all the way to the Supreme Court of the UK. It is just one example of a legal case that might not have been able to make much headway without crowdfunding. Pablo Cortés, Professor at the University of Leicester discussed many of the legal issues connected to 'online-justice' at a European level and the different national trends. Finally, Ernst Steigenga, gave a presentation on the status of the e-CODEX project which allows for e-Justice Communication via online data exchange. He also described the legal basis for the different ways through which e-CODEX will facilitate access to cross border justice in civil law. The session was chaired by President Wallis, who led discussions and took questions after the panellists had concluded their presentations.

The second session of the day was focused on 'The Digital Environment and Liability Issues'. Before the session started, Dirk Staudenmayer, Head of Unit at the EU Commission's DG Justice, introduced the Commission's recent Communication on 'Building a European Data Economy'. He thanked President Diana Wallis and the ELI for hosting the Conference and the active role the ELI had played in the ongoing dialogue between institutions and stakeholders. He was particularly pleased that the Conference touched upon so many issues that the Commission is considering in connection with the emerging EU Data Economy. He presented the Commission's goals on the key topics of the discussion, for example, how to ensure the free flow of data while providing sufficient protection of personal data, how to facilitate access to different types of data for a well-functioning EU market and, the main focus of the session, liability issues in the data economy. ELI Vice-President, Christiane Wendehorst, picked up on Staudenmayer's points and provided a detailed analysis of the many liability issues that can arise in the Internet of Things (IoT). Many of the conventional civil law approaches to liability may lead to uncertainties when it comes to liability for damages caused by a connected device. She stressed that the IoT might require the walls between conventional liability regimes to be broken down for a more holistic approach. Lee Odiam, University of Hull, provided insights from the tech-community and described ways in which 3D-printing can have practical applications that raise various questions of liability and morality. An interesting aspect of his presentation was that while he discussed the actual potential liability of 3D-printing, a 3D printer ran in the background and provided an actual, concrete example of what this technology can achieve.

Finally, Kjell Sévon from the European Parliament's Committee on Legal Affairs discussed the recent report of the Parliament on European Civil Law Rules in Robotics and the liability issues that the increased use of robots and artificial intelligence may create. The panel was chaired by Christian Twigg-Flesner, Professor at the University of Hull.

Day 2 of the ELI Conference started with a session dedicated to 'Building a Data Economy', chaired by Lord John Thomas. Dirk Staudenmayer described the focus of the EU Commission in the field and the main emphasis of the recent EU Commission's Communication. Among the topics that he specifically discussed were the issues of data access, data portability and interoperability all of which need to be ensured for a well functioning Data Economy. Wojciech Wiewiórowski, the Assistant European Data Protection Supervisor (EDPS), informed the participants on Data Subjects next (individual about whom information is stored in IT-based system). He explained the ways, in which the European Data Protection Supervisor anticipates that the data economy will have an impact on data protection. He described how data protection and a vibrant data economy can co-exist and where the biggest risk of conflicts lie. ELI Vice-President, Christiane Wendehorst, focused on personal data and how the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) will have an impact on the Data Economy. One of the issues that all the panellists noted was that Data Subjects do not seem to be overly concerned with the privacy of their personal data and unaware of risks. Christiane Wendehorst introduced a particularly novel idea (in this field) that might be a solution that could enhance the protection of Data Subjects but at the same time ensure the flow of data through the economy. The solution would be a form of data trusteeship, whereby a Data Trustee manages the personal data of the Data Subject and follows his directions to exercise the data rights of the Subject. The Data Trustee would act as a single point of contact between the Data Subject and the Data Businesses that want to utilise the data. The presentations sparked a lively debate.

The final session of the Conference was devoted to 'Smart Contracts and Block-Chain Technology'. Sjef van Erp, Professor of the University of Maastricht, chaired a panel on these extremely topical issues.

ELI Vice-President Christiane Wendehorst.

Adam Ryan and Tom Hingly, both from Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer LLP, gave a detailed account of what Block-Chain Technology is and the distributed-ledger technology behind it. They used the most known example of the commercial application Block-Chain technology, the digital currency Bit-coin as an example. They also explained the logic behind smart contracts, its potential application and limitations. Among the many benefits of smart contracts would be increased security and substantial reduction of back-office costs. They also explained the legal issues that these new technologies face, mainly uncertainty of which governing law should apply, the jurisdiction for resolution of disputes, data protection and security concerns.

Michel Cannarsa, Dean of the Faculty of Law at the Catholic University of Lyon, took the floor and focused on more specific legal issues connected to smart contracts. He explained the key differences between conventional contracts and smart contracts. The benefits of smart contracts, among others, include no need to rely on a presumption of good faith and that their non-performance is virtually impossible.

Therefore, they would reduce the need of enforcement and the need of intermediaries. He also provided insights on the many legal challenges ahead, before the use of smart contracts can become widespread. These novel technologies and their potential in contract law created a lot of debate and interest from the attendees of the Conference.

Diana Wallis concluded the two-day Conference and expressed her fascination with the presentations and stated that the future of private law was already here and it was up to the legal community to make sure it

Hull united experts to discuss 'Emerging Legal Issues in an Increasingly Digital Society'.

First ELI European Young Lawyers Award

The ELI has had a great response to its first European Young Lawyers Award, which was officially launched at the Annual Conference 2016.

The goal of this award is to provide the young European legal community with a mechanism to propose practical suggestions for the improvement of European law, as a way of giving voice to the future European legal experts and to help the ELI in fulfilling its core mission of improving the quality of European law.

In order to participate, candidates had to submit a unique and original paper which was not previously published and is dealing with a European legal issue that could be improved.

The awarded candidate will be invited to present their paper at the ELI Annual Conference (6-8 September).

The University of Kent's Brussels School of International Studies will kindly sponsor this year's award and cover the winner's accommodation and travel expenses up to EUR 1.000. This will provide the winner with an opportunity to meet and greet some of the world's leading law experts and exchange ideas with them.

In addition, the winning contribution will be published on the ELI website and its author will be awarded with two years of free ELI Fellowship, which will allow this person to be involved in Special Interest Groups, present project proposals and participate in the Members Consultative Committees of the different ELI Projects.

The deadline for submission was 28 April and the received submissions will be reviewed within the next few weeks. The announcement of the winner will follow at the end of July.

ELI-UNIDROIT Joint Project 'From Transnational Principles to European Rules of Civil Procedure'

Joint Steering Committee Meeting in Rome

From 5 to 7 April 2017, the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law (UNIDROIT) hosted the ELI-UNIDROIT Joint Meeting in Rome, in which the Steering Committee, the Co-reporters and Members of the Working Groups (WGs) discussed the progress of the Project 'From Transnational Principles to European Rules of Civil Procedure'.

On 5 April, a meeting was held to provide an opportunity to review and discuss a consolidated version of the three final drafts on access to information and evidence, provisional and protective measures, and service and due notice of proceedings. The Co-reporters of the respective Working Groups, and some of the Steering Committee Members, as well as the Co-reporters of the WG 'Structure', focussed on identifying common structure and style of the rules. The consolidation of the first three outputs of the Project revealed that although three different working methods were used, the WGs developed principles of civil procedure, which are not only compatible with each other, but most importantly, interact with each other within a functional whole. Some further adjustments might be necessary, especially with regard to the used terminology and working on overlaps or gap-filling. An issue of the second-language version of the three draft rules was also raised, and it was agreed that the rules would be translated into French, with a possibility to consider further language versions after the publication of the draft.

The meeting on 5 April continued with a discussion on the 'second-' and 'third-cycle' WGs. The Co-reporters of the WGs 'Res judicata and lis pendens', 'Obligations of parties, lawyers and judges', 'Judgments', 'Parties' and 'Costs' were updated on the Project and its milestones in the upcoming months. The Co-reporters, the 'Structure' Group and the Steering Committee also considered questions concerning the exact procedure of consolidation, and clarified aspects of the drafting process. The Co-reporters of the WG 'Structure' shared templates with all the Working Groups, who are currently developing or finalising their drafts. The uniform templates were designed to provide a single format, which would allow to shape and present the draft rules and comments in a more consistent way.

The official part of the Joint Steering Committee Meeting with Members of the Project started on the next day. The Secretary General of UNIDROIT, José Angelo Estrella Faria, and ELI President, Diana Wallis, chaired the meeting from 6 to 7 April. All the Members of the Steering Committee were present during the two-day event, as well as the Co-reporters and Members of all the Working Groups ('Access to information and evidence'; 'Provisional and protective measures'; 'Service and due notice of proceedings'; 'Obligations of parties, lawyers and judges'; 'Res judicata and lis pendens'; 'Judgments'; 'Parties'; 'Costs'; and 'Structure').

The purpose of the morning session on 6 April was the presentation of the consolidated draft of the first three sets of rules on civil procedure. The Co-reporter of the Working Group 'Structure', Xandra Kramer, explained what the intermediate results of consolidation revealed, informing participants that the ultimate goal of the WG was to achieve coherence in terms of scope, format, content, language, and the degree of the elaboration of the formulated rules. To ensure coherence of all the current and future final drafts, the WG 'Structure' introduced a template for harmonisation of the structure of the rules to all of the Working Groups. The template divides the draft into three parts: general part, special part and the cross-border issues. Following such a structure, the teams will be able to submit a version of the rules for further harmonisation by the overarching Group 'Structure'.

The afternoon session on 6 April was devoted to the presentation of the progress report by one of the Co-reporters of the WG 'Parties', Emmanuel Jeuland, who outlined the timescale of the Group to produce a first draft set of rules by November 2017, and a final draft in 2018. He also reported on the topics discussed by the Group at their second meeting, which took place on 3 to 4 March in Paris. The discussion was focused on structure, and how detailed the rules should be. The Members considered the following issues: joinder, intervention and third-party notice; the role of public prosecutors in civil proceedings across Europe; rules on stay of proceeding due to death; rules on mandatory representation by a lawyer; IT related rules: robots as parties.

UNIDROIT Meeting in Rome.

Next, Alan Uzelac, Co-reporter of the WG 'Obligations of parties, lawyers and judges', took the floor in order to present the final draft of the Group. He explained the working method under which the Group has developed its principles, and said that the Members had been working in subgroups: general part, case management, determination of facts, determination of law, and consensual dispute resolution. In each section of the draft, the rules are divided into four parts: parties, lawyers, judges and sanctions. Following that, the Co-reporter presented the most important parts of the draft, thus, for instance, in the general part of the rules, the crucial place is taken by the provisions on the common and shared obligation of all participants to work towards the common goal. Case management is one of the most important special parts of the draft. The WG has received a lot of positive remarks and contributions from the audience and will consider the comments together with the 'Structure' Group in the upcoming months.

The first day was concluded with the presentation of the advanced rule on 'Res judicata' by the Co-reporter, Frédérique Ferrand. She informed participants that the Group has worked in five different languages from the very beginning, which was very helpful. She explained that at the last working meeting in October 2016, the Members discussed preliminary measure motions to set aside a judgment and the necessity to include provisions on infringements of EU law. The discussion moved on with a presentation on 'Lis pendens', which was made by the second Co-reporter of the Group, Burkhard Hess. He explained which sources the Group has taken into account to develop the draft on this topic, for instance, the ALI-UNIDROIT transnational rules of civil procedure, European Regulations, the Lugano Convention, and the case-law of the CJEU. An issue that the Group is aiming to solve while working on developing the rules on lis pendens is how to adapt the European rules to the domestic situation.

During the second day of the Joint Meeting, the Members continued their discussion in view of the consolidation of drafts and examined how the work of the Project's newest Groups could be interlinked to guarantee consistency with the provisions related to the same issues of the procedure already covered by the work of older Groups. In this sense, the Co-reporters of the third-cycle Working Groups, 'Costs', represented by Eva Storskrubb, and 'Judgments', represented by Christoph Alexander Kern and Chiara Besso, presented progress reports and explained the nuances of their subject-areas. These presentations triggered an intensive and fruitful discussion in the audience, with the debates focused on, among others, costs allocation and costs shifting, security of costs of civil procedure, funding alternatives and transparency; the definition of 'judgments', the necessary elements of a judgment, the form of the delivery of a judgment, default judgments and others. It was decided that the Working Groups would remain in contact with the horizontal Group 'Structure' to ensure that the particular issues do not overlap in the drafts. The meeting on 7 April was concluded in the early afternoon. Both Diana Wallis and José Angelo Estrella Faria expressed their words of appreciation for the work advanced by all Members of the Project, and their confidence in the high relevance of the results of the Project.

Upcoming Project Meetings:

7 September (Vienna): Panel Session

16-17 November (Vienna): Joint Steering Committee Meeting

Joint Steering Committee Meeting.

Meeting of the WG 'Judgments'

On 21 February, Members of the WG 'Judgments' convened for the first meeting in 2017 in Basel (Switzerland). The meeting, which was kindly hosted by the University of Basel, provided an opportunity to discuss some of the fundamental questions of the Project, including the structure of the draft rules on judgments, and default judgments; and resulted in a first draft of the general part of the rules.

Later this year, some of the Working Group Members met again on the occasion of the Joint Steering Committee Meeting, which took place in Rome (6-7 April). The Co-reporters of the Group, Professor Chiara Besso and Professor Christoph Alexander Kern, presented the first Progress Report of the Group.

Meeting of the WG 'Provisional and Protective Measures'

Another Working Group convened their meeting on 3 March in Rotterdam (the Netherlands). Members of the WG 'Provisional and Protective Measures' gathered to finalise the draft set of rules and discussed the incorporation of new provisions, as well as the revision of some of the existing parts of the draft.

The Working Group, in particular, discussed whether the provisions on cross-border issues should be included in the draft, as well as the form and exact wording they should use to formulate the final version of rules on asset preservation, interim payments, evidence preservation, and on order to perform or to abstain.

The Working Group Members also had another opportunity to discuss the final provisions of the draft at the Joint Steering Committee meeting in April in Rome (see page 7/8).

Meeting of the WG 'Parties'

From 3 to 4 March, the Working Group on 'Parties' met in Paris. This was the second official meeting of this Working Group, with discussions focussed on the structure and scope of the rules; identification of main issues, such as different concepts across Europe (on 'joinder', 'intervention', 'third party notice'), the role of public prosecutors in civil proceedings, the rules on the stay of proceedings due to the death of a party, the loss of litigation capacity, and other issues.

The Working Group also considered various sources to be taken into account while drafting the provisions on parties, and prepared the material and questions for the discussion at the presentation of the first progress report during the Joint Steering Committee Meeting in April in Rome (see page 7/8).

'WG Provisional Measures' meeting in Rotterdam on 3 March.

'WG Parties' meeting in Paris on 3-4 March.

Meetings of ELI Bodies

Council Meeting in Hull, UK, in March 2017

After the successful conclusion of the Conference on Digitalisation, the ELI Council met in Hull on 31 March and 1 April. One of the most important tasks for the Council was the vote on the Instrument 'Prevention and Settlement of Conflicts of Exercise of Jurisdiction in Criminal Law' as part of the regular project adoption procedure (see page 5 of this Newsletter). The vote was unanimously in favour of this first Instrument of the European Law Institute.

Council Meeting in Hull, UK.

ELI President, Diana Wallis, reported on the activities of the ELI as its President and the Chair of the Executive Committee. She was delighted and proud to note that the ELI had become such a respected and valued contributor to the development of European law and that the Institute had strengthened its ties and cooperation with other organisations such as the ENCJ or UNIDROIT as the ongoing projects perfectly showcase. The Council saw detailed presentations on ongoing projects and discussed many other interesting prospective developments that could heighten the profile of the ELI and further consolidate its membership and facilitate active participation of the myriad of experts that comprise the ELI.

Membership

Maintaining diversity with regard to areas of expertise, nationalities and different professional backgrounds will be essential to keep the ELI a vibrant community of legal professionals, a unique meeting point for its Members and to add legitimacy of projects approved by this broad constituency.

In order to achieve this, the Membership Committee announces different focal points for members throughout the year.

All other applications of excellent lawyers are, as always, highly desirable too, irrespective of this current focus. Membership applications are made online, directly through the ELI website. Detailed information on what the ELI currently does and stands for can be found on the website as well.

Membership fee: if you have not yet paid your membership fee for 2017, please do so by bank transfer or PayPal or by filling in the SEPA Direct Debit mandate form, which you find here. Please contact the Secretariat with any questions arising in this context.

President Diana Wallis at Warwick Congress.

Diana Wallis participated in the first Warwick Congress, which is a novel student-run initiative enthused by the ambition to educate students from all backgrounds and interests. The primary motive is to unite the disciplines of Finance, Economics, Law and Politics to a single platform thus allowing students to gain a holistic perspective on the issues surrounding the world today.

President Wallis spoke about 'Legal Pluralism, Ordering Globalisation; New Identities or Old Boundaries'. Bringing together her own legal and political experience.

International Conference on Dispute Resolution of Consumer Mass Disputes in Haifa, Israel

President Diana Wallis was amongst a number of ELI Fellows presenting at and attending the 2nd Haifa International Conference on 'Dispute Resolution of Consumer Mass Disputes - Collective Redress, Class Actions and ADR' from 16 to 17 March 2017.

The Conference followed on from a similar successful event last year. There is particular interest given the coming review of the European Commission Recommendation of 11 June 2013 on 'Common Principles for Injunctive and Compensatory Collective Redress Mechanisms in the Member States Concerning Violations of Rights Granted under Union Law' (2013/396/EU) upon which the ELI produced a Statement back in 2014, which you can find here.

Diana Wallis emphasised that it was an exceptional Conference with good international comparative presentations, and outstanding for all delegates was the enthralling lecture of the history of the US class action as told by Professor Arthur R. Miller of New York University.

President Wallis, who spoke about cross-border enforcement and ADR, commented that 'there was certainly now much food for thought for follow-up work by the ELI'

European Law Faculties Association (ELFA) 2017, Brno, Czech Republic

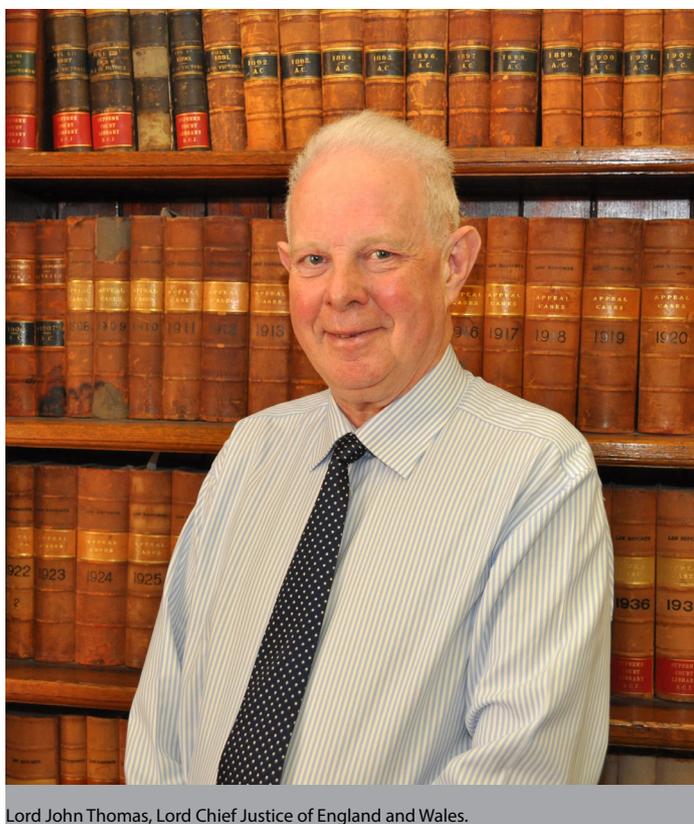

On 19-21 April 2017, the European Law Faculties Association, an EU Institutional Observer, had their Annual General Meeting and Conference. This year's topic was 'Legal Education in Changing Europe', and, therefore, ELI President Diana Wallis participated in a plenary session and gave her insight into 'Developing European Law in Challenging Times'. President Wallis used this opportunity to display the work of the ELI and its European Young Lawyers Award. She was also asked to present the ELFA Award 2016 to the authors of the two best European Law PhD theses of this year.

ELI at the European Forum Alpbach

The ELI is delighted to officially announce being part of this year's European Forum Alpbach. On 28 August 2017, there will be a breakfast with Lord John Thomas as a speaker. The topic of his exciting speech will be 'Enemies of the people? The role of an independent judiciary in times of populism'. Vice-President Christiane Wendehorst will be the Chair.

This year's Legal Symposium will compare and examine parallel existing legal systems, and reflect on differing legal models and hypotheses currently discussed. In particular, it is relevant and necessary to judge how much conflict there is between the continental European and the Anglo-American legal systems. Even from a neutral legal standpoint, the main question now is whether a 'trade war' is in the making. The state of coexistence between the continental European legal system and the Sharia legal system in Europe also calls for this discussion. Further, this question must be examined at a national level, where nation-states have respective legislations through which they handle law and achieve justice through mediation, diversion and severe criminal jurisdiction. A glimpse into multilateral trade agreements and their selected arbitration procedures is also timely.

Further information about the European Forum Alpbach can be found at www.alpbach.org/law.

Münster Colloquia on EU Law and the Digital Economy, Münster, Germany

On 4-5 May, ELI Vice-President Christiane Wendehorst will give, on behalf of the ELI, the welcome address at the Münster Colloquia on EU Law and the Digital Economy. This year's topic will be 'Trading Data in the Digital Economy: Legal Concepts and Tools'. In line with the aim of the Münster Colloquia, the contributions will analyse the various different legal concepts and tools in order to illustrate legislative options at European level to tackle the challenges in the trade of data.

Vice-President Wendehorst will contribute to these issues in a discussion panel moderated by Dirk Staudenmayer, the Head of Unit (DG Justice and Consumers of the European Commission).

SIG Updates

The ELI Special Interest Groups (SIGs) were officially launched during the 2015 ELI Annual Conference. Already at that Conference, some SIGs discussed their potential areas of focus and planned ahead. One year later, in September 2016, SIGs were once again given the opportunity to meet in Ferrara to summarise the results of their work and their achieved medium-term progress.

Some of the SIGs also scheduled further meetings to be held in 2017, which we are pleased to announce in this issue:

Administrative Law

The Administrative Law SIG will conduct, in cooperation with Andrásy University, ELTE University and the Hungarian Supreme Court of Justice (Kúria), a conference in Budapest on 7-8 June 2017. This Conference will be kindly supported by the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung.

On the first day, twelve Members of the SIG will present their thoughts on different topics around administrative law. The evening will be topped off by a reception at the Austrian Ambassador's, H. E. Elisabeth Ellison-Kramer's, residence. On 8 June, participants will be offered the chance to visit the Kúria, which includes a guided tour and a talk with its President, Péter Darák. Further information is available on the SIG's website.

Business and Financial Law SIG

The Business and Financial Law SIG is planning an Inaugural Workshop on 23 June 2017 in Vienna. The event will gather experts of various disciplinary and geographical backgrounds and take place at the Faculty of Law (Juridicum) of the University of Vienna. The Workshop will feature a series of three plenary panels on the following topics: (1) financial transparency and accountability of corporate groups and financial intermediaries, (2) groups of companies, shareholder rights and obligations, and related responsibilities and liabilities, and (3) cross-border mobility of companies.

The Workshop aims to generate an open discussion with all the participants, developing review and constructive critique of existing laws and regulations, while setting plans for the future work of the SIG in view to contribute to the European law-making on these matters. To register, please follow this link. The agenda can be found here.

Digital Law SIG

The Digital Law SIG held a meeting in Hull, UK, at the ELI Conference on Digitalisation on 31 March 2017. The proposals from the following groups were discussed: the Post-CESL Group, the Platform Sub-group, the Free Flow of Data Sub-group, the IoT Sub-group, the Big Data Sub-group, the Autonomous Vehicles Sub-group, and the E-User Self-Protection in an E-Intrusive World Sub-group.

Dispute Resolution SIG

The Dispute Resolution SIG gathered on 28 April 2017 in Leuven (Belgium). The meeting was kindly hosted by the Law Faculty of the KU Leuven. Participants continued the discussion of the topic of the Investor-State Dispute Settlement (ISDS) already touched upon during the first meeting in Wiesbaden in February 2016, and considered another interesting topic on the European Court for commercial matters. More information on this Meeting will be provided in the next issue of the Newsletter (May-June).
